Sin City

The cloud that stands slightly askew,
The moon has covered, in yellow hues,
The buildings misted through fog and dew…

I saw this scene in a fever dream,
A name, an author, a thoughtful beam,
The feeling of bleeding on a warm stream.

Through the office’s yellow glass panel,
The lights, a pattern of hexagonal wax.
The mind, swollen, has begun to crack…

Past lives, a nearby remorse.
Bygone futures, yet to endure.
Wait for me to deduce the present lore…

"Our bodies, void, what more if not empty vessels?
Our souls, void, what more than debt-collectors?"
